Mr. Michael B. Seaton
Director
Operation Cerberus
Department of Energy
Washington, D.C. 20545

Dear Mr. Seaton:

In response to your letter of 12 December 1985, we would be pleased to have STAT participate in the Department of Energy Task Force on Human Reliability. As Chairman of the DCI Security Committee, STAT has stimulated Intelligence Community interest in efforts to utilize the behavioral sciences in improving our security clearance programs. I am sure he will support your efforts to the fullest extent.

STAT Dear

The U.S. Department of Energy is responsible for the design, research and development, and production of nuclear materials, nuclear weapons and devices. In support of the safeguards and security of these activities and products, the Department is in the process of establishing a Human Reliability Program (HRP) to assist in addressing the "insider" threat. The HRP Task Force is a major function of Operation Cerberus, part of the Deputy Assistant Secretary for Security Affairs' responsibilities within the Defense Programs Assistant Secretariat.

The HRP Task Force has prepared a draft statement of policy and program description that is currently under executive review. We are now starting the next stage, which is to prepare a comprehensive and detailed implementation guidelines document. This document will be the basis of our entire implementation, including public rulemaking and Federal employee exemptions.

STAT

In this regard, the HRP Task Force Manager has suggested that

STAT

STAT of your command, be invited to join the Task Force as an observer. Because of experience within the intelligence community and in personnel security, we believe that his colleagial involvement as an observer would be highly valuable. We are also inviting

STAT colleagues of from other military and intelligence agencies to act as observers.

STAT

We would greatly appreciate your willingness to allow to join us in this vital effort to safeguard national security interests.

Yours truly,

Michael B. Seaton
Director
Operation Cerberus
